If you have a person on the commission making these decisions on redrawing the boundaries who has a link with a political party and the commission then redraws the maps to give the party that person is linked to three extra seats, how can you be considered an independent body? How can we have any confidence in your organisation? Do you really want to take Qld (and later Australia) down the road that Trump and the republicans has taken the USA? Look how that's working out. If the redistribution favours one party so heavily, surely that redistribution has to be revisited.
