To whom it may concern,

The new changes with the electorate boundaries in Redland Bay does not represent the current community that actually live in the Redlands.

The new boundaries completey removes the Springwood electorate and has been carved up to be either part of Redland or Capalaba. More of this has been done to other districts in the Gold Coast and Brisbane.

This suggests that the new proposed boundaries does not care for how people as a community gather and live together but the purpose is to increase the ability of certain political parties to increase their voter counts for the next election.

How will these communitates that are carved up to be added to new electorates add to sustainability and cohesion as the proposed report states when their own electorate boundaries has been dismantled right along where their neighbours street lives.

This new boundary proposal requires a revamp and some intelligient understanding on how people actually live together in councils, you cant just divide us because John Sosso says so.
